FINANCIERS IN CHICAGO

the banks and bankers of Chicago an official welcome to the members of the American Bankers' association on the occasion of this, their third convention in our city. Occupying as you do a position unique in American finance and representing as you do not only the small and remote banks, but also the great and strong among our institutions, this privilege becomes an honor.

"It is easy to say that you are welcome and that we are glad to have you with us; but we intend to try not only to make you feel at home but to give evidence of the fact that you are genuinely welcome. In carrying out this purpose we have not sought to make a display of entertainment, nor to prepare a tedious program, consuming every moment of time, through which each visitor must be forced, whether or no; but there has been left opportunity for all to visit their friends and correspondents or to go sightseeing and to the places of amusement, for which cards are supplied, or to do anything else which individual fancy prompts. We have thought that true hospitality lies in making a guest feel first of all that he is welcome, and then, after providing the things necessary for his comfort and physical well being, to place him at ease by allowing reasonable freedom to indulge personal inclinations. It is hoped that this will sufficiently account for all gaps or omissions there may appear to be in the official program.

"If there be any among you who has not found suitable and comfortable quarters, every effort will be made to procure them and to make them satisfactory on application to any person you see wearing a reception committee badge, or at the information bureau at headquarters. It is our earnest wish that every guest be made to enjoy the visit here, and no effort on our part shall be spared to accomplish that end."

Dr. Robert Smart has returned to Albuquerque from Raton, where he was called to investigate a typhoid fever epidemic. In less than a week twelve residents of Raton were taken ill with the fever, and the board of health asked Dr. Smart to investigate.

Dr. Smart spent Saturday and Sunday in Raton, inspecting dairies and taking samples of the town's supply of drinking water. He will analyze samples of milk and water to see if they contain typhoid germs.

The Raton board of health is taking every step to prevent the spread of the disease. Dr. Smart is inclined to believe that the fever was spread by impure vegetables or milk.
